HIS APPEAL TO THE COURT.

[From the San Francisco Chronic le, March 7.]
The last act in the Camp tragedy—the passing of the extreme sentence of the law on his convicted murderer, was consummated yer, terday. Long before the hour appointed for the passing of sentence the corridors of the City Hall yere thronged with did, morbid spectators, crushiving and crowdings to obtain a glimpse of the doeme i man who was to explate his offence on the galicy. Since he had been connected and the control of the greatest orime in the long and varied category of human exime, and since he was as surely and rapidly appreaching the grave as if stricken by the most dead by disease, bevine became an object of public interest, whose every movement, glance and demeanor v. ere watened with absorbing at entire, as the living, look on the last of the dying, with the grave near y. thand. The crowd became so great that Judge Anckinstry sent word to the office or the Chiqf of Police to have the halls and entries cleared 45 once. The relituant crowd was stored away by the policemen, the anxious gazers were compedied to linger about the entrance of the Unimerical gaze of the throng, and took his seat is the court, from by the side of the Deputy Sheriff.

THE APPEARANCE OF THE PRISONER.

Several these in the course of the trial we remarked that, for a man accused of a four murder, Devine preserved an extraordinary composure. Even when the vertoct of guilty was returned ne gazed at the twelve men who were sending him to the grave without the least expression of pain or the slightest finch in the steadlast expression of his or the significant of the prisoner of the sending him to the grave without the least expression of pain or the slightest finch in the steadlast expression of his cold crule eye. But yesterday he seemed to have lost that power of self-control, and his face was pale—grassily pale—and his eye had a shifting, uneasy look, as if he felt the bitter hour of retribution was near and unavoidable. He frequently passed a handkerenief across his face, sometime me Devine lowered his head; and then looked at the Judge steadiastly.

His Honor continued:—"You were tried by a jury in this court and found guilty of murder in the first degree. Have you any legal cause to snow why sentence should not be passed upon you?"

The prisoner motioned to Air. Tyler, his counsel, and then resumed his seat.

Mr. Tyler said:—"The defendant moves for a new trist on the grounds of objection to the rulings of the Court; that the Court abused its discretion to permit the jury to visit the scene of the alleged murder; that the Court erred in allowing Captain Douglass to swear as to what Devine said while the prisoner was under filegal restraint; that the Court erred in ruling out Mrs. Murphy's deposition before the Coroner's jury as evidence. Mrs. Murphy swore before the Coroner merely that Devine said he had shot a man the night before at Bay View."

The Court decided that the jury had been care.

The Court decided that the jury had been carefully instructed on all the points of evidence. He was of the opinion that no error had been committed in regard to the admission of Mrs. Murphy's testimony. The prisoner had had every advantage. All rumor or impressions of his previous character had been set aside, and he was tried solely on the merits of the case. Therefore the motion for a new trial is set aside.

His Honor then turned to the prisoner and asked him if he had anything to allege way sentence of the law should not be passed on him.

DEFINE'S APPEAL.

The prisoner rose, and, again wiping his face, began in a low tone, while a hum of expectation ran through the court room. He said:—I have been badly abused and inisely represented without cause or provocation. One Saturday in May I met a man named Wilson, who asked me if I kept a sailor boarding house. I said no. He said ne had been in the army and wished me to ship him. I took him to Phillips' boarding house on Pacific street, and then gave nim a coat. He told me he wanted to get some clothes he had when he was in the army. I saw mim again the same evening, and we were seen together all over the city. I had some business at the Sherlin's office, and he told me to call there again on Monday. I due so between the hours of eleven and twelve. I went from there to the corner of Sansome and Washington streets. I saw Wilson at the corner and we warked along sansome street together. Officers Devin and Supple sam were, I gave Wilson four bits on Bush street. I then came up Kehrny street and waiked as far as Maskon street, but changed my mind and went down to the foot of Fourth street, where I was acquainted. There I jumped on one of the Bay View cars with the intention of going out to the end of the road. I was in conversation with the conductor all the way on that car. At the depot we went into a saloon together to take a drink. The best part of the way on that car. At the depot we went into a saloon to remove them, and walked for the next car to the c city. I took inst car and rode into town. On the corner of Pacific and Davis streets i met Kelly, who was a witness on the stand. He asked me to ioan him a dollar. I told him I needed wnat i nad, out I said in he wanted a dollar badly he might take and pawn my pistol. This me retused to do. I then started my Jackson street and waiked round there till seven or eight o'clock, when I met a man who knew Murphy. I went to Murphy's and had several drinks, and at hast got under the inducence of liquot. The Murphy's requested me to remain at their house all might. He and his wife quarrelled, and I interiered. He got angry, and we had some words. Finally he pushed me out and shut the door in my lace. As he did so I changed the pistol I had in my ning pocket to my coat, but I done no minenton or using he on him. I then went to Geneson's and had some drinks there. I told him I had no mave remained round town in that way. There was steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of Meiggs wharf, as a steamer lying at the end of the officers. Devine, who toward the close of his appeal grew excited and raised his voice, then ceased, and his

Honor said:—
James Devine, you have been faithfully tried and co, viced of murder in the first degree. The fact of your being poor has not deprived you of any legal advantages. Your case has been defended aby and well.
The Priconer-Mr. Tyler has worked for me with

The Priconer—Mr. Tyler has worked for me without receiving. a dollar, and has done all that an honest man could do. I did not compant this murder, but if it is any satisfaction to Your Honor to send me or any cher innocent man to his cold grave without cause or provocation I have nothing to say.

His Honor—The jury have tried you faithfully and conscientuously, and I do most trail concern in their versict. The statement you have just made I consider as a continuation of the pertinacious dental of your guilt. I trust you will not harden your heart by thinking that no one commiserates your heart by thinking that no one commiserates your piace any reliance on my judgment. I say there is no cartiny nope that you can ulturately escape

The prinishability of the law. I therefore trust that you will have recourse to your spiritual advisers, and prepare for your end.

The sentence of the Court is that on Friday, the 26in day of april next, between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and five o'clock in the afternoon, you be taken by the Sheriff to some place within the city and county of San Francisco, and there hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have merry on your soul.

The prisoner, though with every shade of agonized leeling passing over his corpse-like face, never moved his body until the last words of doom were ended, and tach he recied like a drunken man. His features were contracted in a spasm of the keenest pata, his eyes were set and staring, and all his previous self-control was gone in this terrible apprehension of a volent death so near at head. One of the deputies supported him as he cluttened wildly at a glass of water that stood on the table by him. He sipped it, and then sinking into a chair, fung up his hands despairingly and ascemed to a fier the keenest pangs of dread and despair. All the impassive cooliness was gone, and the Indian-like stolidness with which he had heard the verdict of the jury was replaced by the terror of a guilty man on the brink of the grave.

Sheriff Adams had a carriage on Merchant street in which to convey Devine to the jail. The crowd could not be disappointed in a look at the condemned, and when the prisoner, guarded by the forughs and loaders. He was hustled into the carriage by the officers and driven rapidly to the jail, where another crowd awaited him. Here Device appeared to have recovered from his agitation at the passing of sentence, and waked steadily up the steps of his prison nouse, and the doors closed heavily on the doomed convict, with the grim spectre of the gallows to haunt his remaining hours among the living.

Among other matters which came before them was the question in reference to raising the saturies of the teachers in the Primary and Grammar schools. The Board the Primary and Grammar schools. The Board finally passed a resolution raising the salaries of the female Grammar school teachers eighteen per cent and the Primary teachers twenty per cent. This will make the highest salary of a female principal of a Grammar school $2,000 and the highest salary in the Primary department $1,800. They also passed a resolution that after a teacher had served ten years in the schools in a satisfactory manner the male teacher will be entitled to a salary of $3,000, and the lady teacher $2,000 per annum.

A PEANUT PEDLERS' BATTLE.

Lawrence Ziegler is an adopted citizen of Newark, who has been doing a thriving trade in peanuts on the corner of Washington and Market streets. So great was his prosperity that he in-curred the envy of another peanut merchant named Burt Jeralemon. The upsnot of this envy was that Burt ordered Lawrence to vacate his premises, which Lawrence recognitive the streets. premises, which Lawrence peremptorily declined to do. Burt then threatened bloody deeds, and on saturday night, near "the bewitching hour," waylaid his mercantile rival in Brentnal place and telled him to the ground with a club. "Murder !!" "Watgh!" shouted the prostrate peanut man as Burt fied. Strange to say, a policeman was handy, and with the aid of citizens captured the nying Burt and condusted him to the station house. Ziegier was picked up, as well as the broken club with which he had been felled, and assisted thither also. He was held as a wifness. His assailant will be tried to-day.

BURGLARY IN WILLIAMSBURG.

The office of Pomeroy's pork packing establishment, corner of Grand and Third stress, Williams burg, was entered by burglars at an early hour yesterday morning, and the door of the safe, which contained $500, was removed by drilling. Officer Peter Flaherty having heard an unnsual noise there Peter Flaherty having heard an unusual noise there raised one of the front windows for the purpose of observing what was going on, when he heard the sound of departing footsteps from the rear. Calling another officer to his assistance they entered and found the rear door wide open and the outer door of the safe of, with jimmes, chiacis and other burglarious, as well as deadly weapons, lying beside it. These were removed to the Fourth street station house. The burglars retreated before they obtained any piunder,

DRY GOODS MARKET.

The general market for the past week has been only moderately active, the large business of the past two months producing a little sluggishness at Bleache I sheetings and shirtings have been in good demand from jobbers, and the piece trade is quite active. Wamsutta has advanced to 21c.

Brown sheetings and shirtings are moving well with jobbers, both by the piece and package. The market is firm and stock low with agents.

Colored cottons have moved fairly. Denims, cottonades and ticks are moderately active, especially in new and attractive styles. The basis of prices is not satisfactorily settled and an advance to sharp 12½ cents is predicted.

Dress goods have sold actively, a variety of styles being in the market to attract buyers. Summer styles are well sold up with agents, and the outlook promises higher prices. American dress goods are steadily improving in attractiveness and promise in some departments to crowd out foreign faories.

Sin wis are moving well, desirable light wool styles being well sold up with agents, and a profitable business done with jobbers.

Woollen goods are reported as quiet with agents, but active with jobbers.

Beavers and doeskins show little movement. Repeliants are more active. Satinets are restricted by the advance in price. Flannels are in good demand for all grades and tickets, prices are improving, and supplies low with agents.
